Christmas Catalogue

The 1907 Tiffany Blue Book or annual Christmas Catalogue, will be ready October 20th

As heretofore the Blue Book contains no illustrations

There are about 600 pages filled with concise descriptions and prices of jewelry, silverware, watches, clocks, bronzes, pottery, glass and other artistic merchandise

An alphabetical side index gives quick access to the information

To all persons at a distance from trade centres this Blue Book is a great convenience, as it conveys suggestions and gives prices of articles suitable for gifts

Tiffany & Co. always welcome a comparison of prices, and the freedom with which the minimum and maximum prices are quoted throughout this little catalogue is an evidence that the house as cordially invites a comparison of prices up on Fifth Avenue as it always did in its old home on Union Square. Upon application, a copy of the book will be sent to intending purchasers without charge by addressing Tiffany & Co., Fifth Avenue and Thirty-seventh Street—Press Reviews

DAVID C. PREYER EDITORS J. M. BOWLES

Application for entry as second-class mail matter pending. Copyright, 1906, by The Collector and Art Critic Co.

VOL. V.

NOVEMBER, 1906

NO. 1

The first number of the Fifth Volume of The Collector and Art Critic appears in a greatly improved form.

As the change was decided upon only three weeks before the magazine went to press, the transformed appearance of the magazine will be surprising to those who have any understanding of the publishing business.

The credit is due to the entrance of Mr. J. M. Bowles as my Associate Editor. Mr. Bowles has an enviable reputation as a typographical expert. His "Notes on the Walters Collection," his quarterly "Modern Art," published for five years in Indianapolis and Boston, and his recent venture, "Art and Life"—which is now combined with The Collector and Art Critic—were triumphs in bookmaking. This distinctive specialty and his editorial experience render him a valuable co-worker in the building up of this magazine, which we will now make the leading American art periodical.

DAVID C. PREYER

TO THE PUBLIC

One of the best ways to popularize good art is through the medium of a first-class illustrated art magazine of wide circulation.

The Collector and Art Critic, which has endeavored to foster good art, has charged three dollars a year for its subscription, which amount has been willingly paid by a large number of art lovers. But the price prevented its wide popularity and restricted the circulation.

The Company publishing the magazine has now decided to place it before the public, not only in an enlarged and improved form, but at a much more popular price.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR

will be the cost of a year's subscription, beginning with the current issue, November, 1906.

To those who subscribe immediately (a one dollar bill may be mailed to us in an envelope, at our risk) the November and December issues of the magazine will be sent free of charge, in addition to the twelve numbers for 1907.
